

1.

- a. The problem my website is attempting to solve is to reduce the barrier for accessing information in a card game that is only available in Japan.
- b. My product idea is to create an informative website that allows users to easily access information
- c. The website I'm building is a news site.
- d. The mission statement is to make a Japanese exclusive card game more available by making it easier for people outside of Japan to get information about the game.

2.

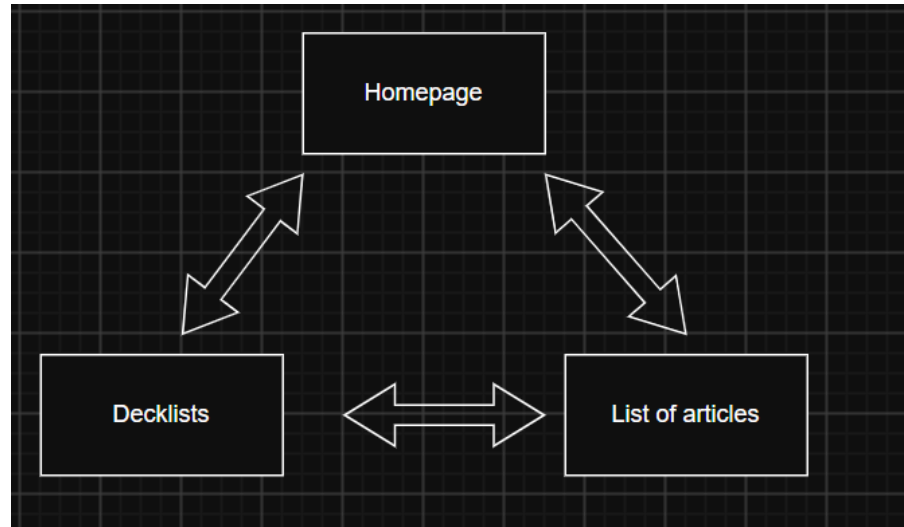

- a.
 - i. The age range of my target audience varies because anyone at any age can play and enjoy card games.
 - ii. The gender distribution also varies because it's not focused on one exact gender.
 - iii. The countries my visitor live would most likely be in an english speaking country or any user who knows English although some users from Japan may also use the website for information
 - iv. The areas that the users live varies since anyone with internet access can play the card game, although not physically.
- b. The Socioeconomic Details of the visitors would be irrelevant to the website because their social or economic status wouldn't affect their interest in the game
- c.
 - i. The users would most likely use the web often for newly available information that would be constantly updated
 - ii. The website can be accessed with either PC or mobile so the information can be readily accessible.

Location	United Kingdom	Malaysia	United States
Occupation	Content Creator	Tournament Organizer	Competitive Player
Web Use	Information	Information	Information
Reasons for coming to the site	Easy to access	Uploading winning lists to the site	Seeing what the current best decks are

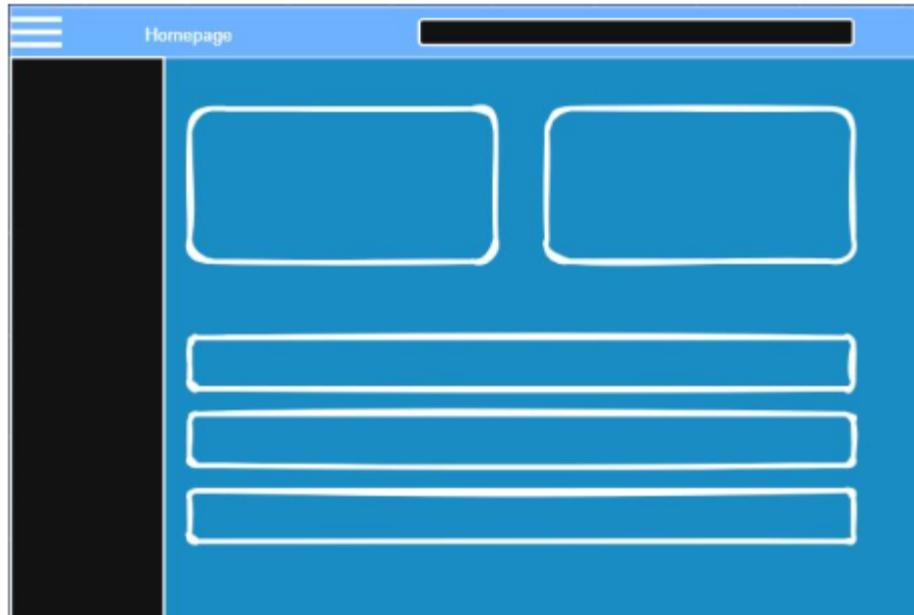

d.

- e. Some reasons people would be coming to my site is to upload decklists they found successful, look up new cards that were shown, or just want to look up information about the cards.
- 3.
- a.
 - i. The main goal of my website is to give readily available information to people who want something to start with.
 - ii. The most important action I want users to take on my site is to submit decklists so other people can see and use them to give them an idea to make their own.
 - b.
 - i. A database of cards and a list of decklists would be essential to help the users find information for what they want.
 - ii. My homepage would highlight the main information such as a search bar for looking up the database of cards, a list of articles about anything important, and a widget for accessing decklists.
 - c.
 - i. A website that gave me the most information for my design is <https://www.duellinksmeta.com> which shows all the information needed at the front and a search bar for cards with the related information for them.
 - ii. The overall style of my site would be playful similar to the artstyle and gameplay of the card game.
 - iii. I want the mood of the site to be fun and simplistic.
 - d.
 - i. The SDLC model I chose is Agile
 - ii.
 - iii.
 - e.

f.

g.

Similar

idea for Article and decklists.

h.

- i. Zoom in feature for people with visual impairments to allow them to read the text easier. The website shouldn't be as complex for other impairments for motor and cognitive due to the simplistic design of how the website should be.
- ii. Magnifier